The residents of the neighborhood have determined to enforce the law for any violation of this injunction. The police are on the trail of all who have already begun this season to violate the injunction.

MISCEGENATION .- Lieutenant George P. Wood, of Boston, Mass., was married on the 25th ultimo, at Beaufort, by the Rev. Arthur Waddell, a colored preacher, to Susan Ulmer, a colored girl. Wood, we understand, is from a respectable family, and held a commission in a Massachusetts regiment, known as the Bay State Cadets, during the late war. His general appearance is that of a gentleman. The evening after their marriage Wood and Susan promenaded Bay-street in company with another colored girl, and, on Monday morning, to k their departure for St. Helena Island, where Wood has a store on one of the plantations of his uncle, Mr George Frost, a well known importer of silks in Boston, Mass. Susan is a native of Beaufort, and was owned before and during the war by a planter on the

THE BROOKLYN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY. Mr. James G. Holmes, Jr., of this city, is the agent of this well established and highly popular company, which now holds a prominent place in the front rank of the progressive life insurance institutions of the country. The Brooklyn was the first company to supply the defect in life insurance, by giving an equitable payment in cash for every relinquished policy—certainly a great innovation, that ought to have been adopted long ago. The credit of its adoption by the Brooklyn is. in no wise, diminished by the fact that the accumulated assets of the company have not been swollen to their present figures to any appre ciable extent by illegitimate profits from confiscated payments of policy holders.

DEPARTURE OF THE PALMETTO FOR ATLANTA. This morning the Palmetto Steam Fire Engine Company will take their departure, via the South Carolina Railroad, for Augusta, where they will remain four or five hours, and thence for Atlanta, to join in the general parade there. THE SENTINEL GUARDING THE DUST .- We were much pleased yesterday by the inspection of a design for the monument to the Confederate dead of the Washington Light Infantry. It is a volunteer design to be offered by our fellow townsman, John H. Devereux. He has seized upon that poetic thought of the gifted poet priest, Rev. A. J. Ryan, of "The Sentituel Guarding the Dust"-one of the best poems from his fluent pen. The idea is expressed by the architect as follows: Upon a square platform of stone, some forty feet across, and approached by a flight of steps from each side, he has raised a temple some fifty two feet high, and of octagonal form. The corners of the square are relieved by four palmetto trees, to be of natural size, and enclosed in a balastered square, with architectural enrichments surrounding and supporing the tree. The temple will be a magnificient structure in itself, being an octagon of unequal sides, with disengaged columns projecting from the lesser sides, and raised to a height of twenty feet to the entablature. On the inner columns is raised a dome fifteen feet in height, and surmounted by an equestrian statue of General Pettigrew, a distinguished member of the corps, who was killed in the war. The structure thus raised forms a penetralia, in which is placed ignary on of marble, in which the ashes of the martyred dead are to be deposited. In each of the projections or wings formed by the disengaged columns is placed a sentinel in the uniform of the Washington Light Infantry guarding the dust of the dead. Over the sentinel, and surmounting the wings, are allegorical figures representing Fame, History, Fidelity and Hope. On the ceiling of the dome, which is divided into thirty panels, are inscribed the names of the members of the corps, a panel being dedicated to each battle in which the corps was engaged. The structure is to be of the Corinthian order of architecture, and is to be built of bronze. We trust that the drawing will be completed in time for the fair.

PRESEAVE YOUR HEALTH.—The principal objection to a residence in this latitude is the tendoncy of the climate to develope bilious and mia-matic diseases. To this evil medical skill has long sought an efficient and reliable remedy. It has at last been discovered, and is now presented to the public by Dr. O. S. Prophitt, of Covington, Ga., whose celebrated medicines have been thoroughly tested and found fully to answer the desired end. His advertisement, in another column of this paper, is no humbug, as will be certified by all who have given his medicines a fair trial. These remedies are prepared only by Dr. O. S.
